2 Grammar Reported speech

When you report the things people say, the verb tense often "shifts back."

Direct speech

Michael Landy:

- "My goal is to destroy all my possessions."
- "I want to bury them underground."
- "My father gave me a sheepskin coat."
- "I haven't found the right shopping center."
- "I have been making an inventory."

Ginny:

- "I can't throw anything away."
- "Maybe I'll stop buying so much stuff."

Reported speech

He said (that) . . .

- his goal was to destroy all his possessions.
- he wanted to bury them underground.
- his father had given him a sheepskin coat.
- he hadn't found the right shopping center.
- he had been making an inventory.

She said (that) . . .

- she couldn't throw anything away.
- maybe she would stop buying so much stuff.

When you report information that is still true, the verb tense often remains the same.

Someone explained to me that this is what you call "performance art."

Here are some things people said about their possessions. Complete the sentences to report what they said. Compare with a partner. Do you know any people like these?
